Helene Leininger
Instructor

Helene Leininger is a local potter who has developed & shared unique techniques for 30 years. Recently, she spent 5 years working with fellow artists in North Carolina's Appalachian area. It is there she discovered the organic art of slab building. Both therapeutic & functional in design, this technique has been used by potters for generations. Hand building pottery, using slabs of clay and dimensional surface textures, creates pieces that could never be produced using a potter's wheel.

Each session includes 2 classes. First class consists of creating with clay. The second week focuses on glazing techniques. Clay, glaze, firing costs & CHOCOLATE are included in the fee.
